

Enormous interest in The Creation Exhibition in France

In the wake of Harun Yahya's Atlas of Creation that has given rise to an earthquake effect in France, a Creation Exhibition once again demolishing the lie of evolution was held in the center of Paris.

The exhibition, visited by some 2,500 people at the Palais des Congrès Marcel Dufriche in Paris on Sunday 15 April, displayed fossils dating back hundreds of millions of years. The fossils, proofs of creation, once again demonstrated that living things have undergone not the slightest change for millions of years and that they were created, with exactly the same features as they have now.

The exhibits attracting the greatest attention were a 73-million-year old lion skull, a 42-million-year-old wolf skull, and a 125-million-year-old cricket.

Officials stated that there were enormous demand for the Creation Exhibition, which attracted considerable interest from university students, to be staged again, particularly in universities and cultural centers.
