In 2011, the European Union published a report indicating the 10 biggest problems in the world according to the EU. In the survey conducted, EU citizens were asked to rank the problems they thought constituted the biggest threat to the world. According to the survey, the problems EU citizens were concerned about are, in an ascending order: Proliferation of nuclear weapons, armed conflict, spread of an infectious disease, the increasing global population, availability of energy, international terrorism, the economic situation, climate change and poverty, hunger and lack of drinking water...

The report seems to explore these problems from the viewpoint of the people in the top 1% in terms of wealth. Today, everyone brings forth his own requests first before the others. A well-to-do person in the United States considers climate change as the major problem while microbiologists prioritize global epidemics. For political analysts, nuclear weapons, international terrorism and conflict zones such as India-Pakistan, Korean Peninsula or the Middle East are the problems requiring the most urgent interventions.

2011 yılında, AB dünyadaki en büyük 10 problemi sıraladığı bir rapor yayınladı. Bu rapora göre az önemliden başlayarak dünyanın problemleri şöyle: Nükleer Silahlanma, Silahlı Çatışmalar, Bulaşıcı Hastalıklar, Global Nüfus Artışı, Enerji Kaynaklarının Azalması, Uluslararası Terörizm, Ekonomik Durum, İklim Değişimi ve Açlık, Fakirlik ve Temiz Suya Ulaşamama..
