

France establishes new house of worship for Muslims

As there have been no enough places for Muslims to perform prayers, they are using streets of Paris in France. But this problem is being solved now as executives from the two mosques of Paris' 18th region, signed a contract for a building, which will be allocated, for Muslims to perform worship.

Halil Ebubekir, Chief Mufti of Paris Mosque, announced that Muslims can perform prayers at the new building as of this Friday and stated; "I am very happy that our Muslim brothers will fulfill their religious duties in honored conditions."
