

Two key suggestions for a solution in Egypt

The situation in Egypt calls for elections to be held without losing time. This is necessary to restore the order in Egypt.

However, even after new elections are held no result can be attained unless two key points are resolved.

The first one is the complete eradication of radicalism in Egypt. The ruling party should let youngsters be modern, allow women to wear whatever they like. They should have friendly dialogue with the Christians and Jews in the country. There should be freedom and modernity in society and the modern understanding of Islam should prevail in Egypt. The true understanding of Islam as lived during the time of the Companions of our Prophet (pbuh) should be widespread.

Secondly an intellectual struggle should definitely be carried out against materialism and Darwinism. Youngsters should be taught the falsity of both Darwinism and materialism using scientific evidence.

The arrested politicians in the country should be immediately released and the members of the Muslim Brotherhood should be given their freedom. This is a necessity that needs to be emphasized extensively until the matter is solved.

The arrests made after the recent coup in Egypt are unlawful, unjustified and are executed unquestioned, hence the members of the Muslim Brotherhood should immediately be released.
