

Africa blinded by illusory fiscal aid

Afrika'da Kolonyalizm bitti mi?

It has been almost 50 years since the colonial powers withdrew from Africa. Today, the African countries no longer face military threats of the imperialist countries, nor are these regions governed by their officially appointed administrators. Nevertheless, it is still impossible to say that many African countries are fully autonomous or can utilize their abundant natural resources efficiently enough to ensure the minimum needs of their citizens are met. Africa sadly continues to suffer under extreme poverty in the wake of the post-colonialism era.

Based in KwaZulu-Natal, with 690,000 readers, the weekend newspaper The Sunday Tribune published Harun Yahya's article.
