

RED WOLF SKULL

A 51-million-year-old red wolf skull exactly reflects the characteristics and details of this living species. Had no such fossil specimen ever appeared, no doubt Darwinists would have continued to produce innumerable scenarios regarding the supposed evolution of red wolves. They would have proposed countless transitional forms and related countless speculations. But this fossil specimen leaves no room for Darwinist fairy tales. This also applies to all other living things, and also to human beings. Every scenario ever dreamed up by Darwinists has been based on a lie. Like all their other physical characteristics, red wolves' teeth and jaws have undergone not the slightest structural change over millions of years.
