Two old friends: Israel and Turkey

By ADHAN OKTAZ

A few years ago, when the Middle East began to resemble a black hole, the powerful relationship between Turkey and Israel became a topic of interest. As I have said many times, through various channels, an alliance between the two countries could be some steps towards peace in the region. In fact, it is not just the two countries that are important in this regard, but also the people of Israel and Turkey. The two nations have a long history of cooperation, and this is not just in the area of trade, but also in the area of culture and education. The two nations have a long history of cooperation, and this is not just in the area of trade, but also in the area of culture and education.

It is generally a matter of mutual respect, of course. Israel and Turkey are both nations with a long history of cooperation. The two nations have a long history of cooperation, and this is not just in the area of trade, but also in the area of culture and education. Bundan birkaç yıl önce, gitgide bir karadeliğe doğru sürüklenen Ortadoğu'da, güçlü bir İsrail-Türkiye ilişkisi her zamankinden daha elzem bir ihtiyaçtı. Daha önce çok defa, pek çok vesile ile dile getirdiğim gibi böyle bir ittifak, Suriye'nin bugünkü duruma gelmesini bir nebze olsun engellenebilir, radikal grupların güçlenmesine set çekebilir, Türkiye-Mısır, İsrail-Filistin ilişkilerinin düzelmesi için bir vesile olabilirdi. Özellikle Arap Baharı'nın başladığı ve Arap ülkelerinin bir kısmının kargaşaya doğru sürüklendiği dönemlerde böyle bir ittifak, savaşların ve çatışmaların hızını kesecek, belki de Ortadoğu, şimdikinden çok daha farklı bir duruma olacaktı.
