

Daha kaliteli bir siyaset için daha çok kadın

Feel the Math

NUMBERS GAME: Many people have an inaccurate impression about the basic arithmetic of the United States presidential campaign.

This is my fifth presidential campaign as a New York Times columnist, and I've reached a lot of decisions concerning it, and I came into this one prepared for the worse. Do I, I thought.

Politicians, of course, lie, and have been a number of times this year. But they've worked better than many people think. Most seriously, Donald Trump's rise didn't defy the polls — on the contrary, he was widely leading the polls by September.

PAUL BRINKMAN

Just scratching the surface of the migrant problem

INFLUX OF ISSUES: The incidents at Langkawi, Wang Kelian show human trafficking can occur anywhere, anytime

ALREADY moving with a woman past in Langkawi, when the car will hit and will catch my attention.

MELISSA CHOO

More women for higher quality in politics

EMPOWERMENT: Greater participation of women will make politics more decent, and the world will benefit.

Nearly half of the world's population is women. This translates in population, which seems to be halved at first, is not in any respect reflected in the representation women have and their position and status within society. The education level of the female population is considerably lower than that of the male population in almost all countries, and that working population among them is lower as well. Women in the workplace work less than their male colleagues in the same position. Furthermore, women are still subjected to verbal or physical abuse by men, even in the most developed countries. As a matter of fact, women are not safe anywhere in society as well as working women, because a part of social life indicate superior quality. Going to work in a male-dominated profession is not safe and protecting their dignity and safety are all very real concerns for women.

HARUN YAHYA

Empowerment: Greater participation of women will make politics more decent, and the world will benefit. President Tsai Ing-wen (left) and Vice-President Chen Chun-feng (right) are seen during their inauguration ceremony in Taipei, Taiwan, on May 20. Women make up nearly half of the Parliament in countries with established democracy, they represent only one-fifth of lawmakers in Asia, of particular interest in Asia, of particular interest in Africa, which are considered as democracies.

Queen of Sheba, another of Prophet Jesus, is shown as a role model not just for women, but for all of humanity. The Prophet Muhammad's wife, Khadija, was a woman of strong character, running her own business and dealing with society at large.

Although what God wants in the Quran is to obtain the social position on women varies in many aspects, from their attire and decoration to their self-care and decoration to go out to destinations in many Islamic communities. This approach is not only a woman's moral character but also her Islamic world knowledge. This Islamic world knowledge should be taught to women from an early age. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right.

To increase the participation of women in politics, gender equality programmes have been put in place in the United Nations. In fact, Michelle Sacketh, head of UN Women and former president of Chile, called on world leaders to increase the participation of women in politics and to use quotas to expand the participation of women.

What is needed in this regard is the fact that women have far less power in the public sphere than men. The world average of women in Parliament is 20.5 per cent. In countries where democracy prevails the participation of women in politics is noticeably greater than that of men in other countries. "We need to increase the number of women in politics," said the United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon in 2010. "The world has a long way to go if it is to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of women." This is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right.

For instance, when women make up nearly half of the Parliament in countries with an established democracy, they represent only one-fifth of the United States and European countries. This ratio is one-fifth in Asia and in an even lower level in the Middle East and Africa, which are considered as democracies.

France has been a role model for women, but for all of humanity. The Prophet Muhammad's wife, Khadija, was a woman of strong character, running her own business and dealing with society at large.

Although what God wants in the Quran is to obtain the social position on women varies in many aspects, from their attire and decoration to their self-care and decoration to go out to destinations in many Islamic communities. This approach is not only a woman's moral character but also her Islamic world knowledge. This Islamic world knowledge should be taught to women from an early age. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right.

To increase the participation of women in politics, gender equality programmes have been put in place in the United Nations. In fact, Michelle Sacketh, head of UN Women and former president of Chile, called on world leaders to increase the participation of women in politics and to use quotas to expand the participation of women.

What is needed in this regard is the fact that women have far less power in the public sphere than men. The world average of women in Parliament is 20.5 per cent. In countries where democracy prevails the participation of women in politics is noticeably greater than that of men in other countries. "We need to increase the number of women in politics," said the United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon in 2010. "The world has a long way to go if it is to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of women." This is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right.

For instance, when women make up nearly half of the Parliament in countries with an established democracy, they represent only one-fifth of the United States and European countries. This ratio is one-fifth in Asia and in an even lower level in the Middle East and Africa, which are considered as democracies.

France has been a role model for women, but for all of humanity. The Prophet Muhammad's wife, Khadija, was a woman of strong character, running her own business and dealing with society at large.

Although what God wants in the Quran is to obtain the social position on women varies in many aspects, from their attire and decoration to their self-care and decoration to go out to destinations in many Islamic communities. This approach is not only a woman's moral character but also her Islamic world knowledge. This Islamic world knowledge should be taught to women from an early age. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right.

To increase the participation of women in politics, gender equality programmes have been put in place in the United Nations. In fact, Michelle Sacketh, head of UN Women and former president of Chile, called on world leaders to increase the participation of women in politics and to use quotas to expand the participation of women.

What is needed in this regard is the fact that women have far less power in the public sphere than men. The world average of women in Parliament is 20.5 per cent. In countries where democracy prevails the participation of women in politics is noticeably greater than that of men in other countries. "We need to increase the number of women in politics," said the United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon in 2010. "The world has a long way to go if it is to achieve gender equality and the empowerment of women." This is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right. It is not a luxury, but a right.

Dünyadaki insan nüfusunu yarıya yakını kadınlardan oluşmaktadır. İlk başta dengeli gibi görünen bu dağılımı kadınların sahip oldukları imkânlarda ve toplum içindeki konum ve değerlerinde görmek ise imkânsızdır. Hemen hemen tüm toplumlarda kadın nüfusun eğitim derecesi erkekler göre çok daha düşüktür. Çalışma oranları daha azdır. Kadınlara aynı işlerde yarıya çalıştıkları erkeklerden daha düşük ücret almaktadırlar. Tüm bunların yanında gelişmiş ülkelerde bile kadınlar erkeklerden sözlü ya da fiziki şiddet görmeye devam etmektedirler. Oysa kadına değer vermek, kadınlara öne çıkarmak ve hayatın bir parçası olmalarını sağlamak üstün bir kalite özelliğidir. Kadına ilgi göstermek, kadınların geleceğini düşünmek, onurunu, iffetini korumak da güzel ahlakın gereğidir.

Malezya'da yayınlanan New Straits Times gazetesinin 30 Mayıs 2016 tarihli sayısında Harun Yahya'nun "Daha kaliteli bir siyaset için daha çok kadın" isimli makalesi yayımlandı.

<http://www.nst.com.my/news/2016/05/148773/more-women-higher-quality-politics>

<http://www.harunyahya.org/tr/Articles/222062/Daha-kaliteli-bir-siyaset-icin-daha-cok-kadin>

<https://www.harunyahya.inform/makaleler/daha-kaliteli-bir-siyaset-icin-daha-cok-kadin-61954>